REVISED SCHEDULE OF HOURS

For the Employes of the Street Railways Throughout State Went Into Effect Today

The revised schedule of working hours for the employes of the local division of the Bay State Street Railway Company went into effect this morning, and hereafter as provided by the law recently enacted by the legislature, no employe of the local division, or in fact any conductor, motorman or trainman in the employ of street railways in Massachusetts, can be compelled to work more than nine hours in 12 consecutive hours, but the employes have the privilege of working more hours if they so desire.

The work of rearranging the hours was a difficult task but the officials of the local division have succeeded in doing so in a manner which is satisfactory to all concerned. The different runs are bid on by the men, seniority prevailing in the choice of selections. Therefore, on a number of the lines there will be new men, but the majority of the older men will be found on the same cars which they have been on since the last drabbing.

The new law relative to the revision of working hours of employes of street railways in the state reads that "a day's work for all conductors, motormen and trainmen shall be arranged by the employer upon the basis of nine hours platform work, provided, however, that if in any case the schedule cannot be so arranged as to furnish a day's work of approximately nine hours and it is impossible to provide one not exceeding nine and one-half hours, the schedule may be so arranged the platform time above the nine hours to be paid for as an addition to the nine hours work."

The law further states: "The day's work of men employed on regular cars shall be arranged to be performed within 12 consecutive hours. The work of any extra man who is regularly employed may with his consent be arranged in early and late halves or portions, but there shall be an interval of not less than eight hours between the close of the work of one day for such extra man and the beginning of the work of the next day, within which they shall not be required to perform any work except in cases of emergency. Nothing herein contained shall be held to prohibit spare men from performing as substitutes in case of emergency the work of employes unexpectedly absent."

No officer or agent of such company shall require from said employes more than nine hours platform work for a day's labor except as herein expressly provided. Threat of loss of employment or threat to obstruct or prevent the obtaining of employment by the employees, or threat to refrain from employing any employee in the future shall be considered coercion and 'requiring' within the meaning of this section; on legal holidays and on Sundays and in case of unavoidable delay or other emergency, or at any time at the request of the employee, extra labor may be performed for extra compensation. A company which violates the provisions of this act shall forfeit for each offence not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars."

probability for ambassador to Germany under Wilson. Frederic C. Penfield has served before in the diplomatic service. He was appointed by Cleveland vice consul general in London in 1885. In 1892 during Cleveland's second term he was made diplomatic agent and consul general to Egypt with the rank of minister resident and served for four years. Mr. Penfield married for his second wife, Mrs. Annie Weightman Walker of Philadelphia, chief owner of the extensive drug business left by her father. She is one of the wealthiest women in America, and it has been asserted frequently that her fortune is larger than that of any other American woman.

HANGS HIMSELF IN DARK

St. Paul Workmen Shocked by Strange Suicide of a Fellow Employee

ST. PAUL, Jan. 1.—After conversing in a dark room for a quarter of an hour, employes of a St. Paul lumber company were startled when the lights were turned on early yesterday to see the lifeless body of co-worker dangling from a ceiling stanchion, almost in the center of the group. The man had hanged himself while his companions talked. His name and address were not known at the plant, according to the foreman.

CHURCHES TO UNITE

Consolidation to go into Effect as Soon as Possible and New Church Will be Known as French Evangelical Church

It is stated that the French Baptist and the French Congregational churches of this city are to unite. A vote was taken by both churches a week ago Sunday and the decision was unanimously in favor of the plan. The new church will be known as the French Evangelical church and the consolidation will go into effect as soon as a decision has been reached as to the location.

The French Congregational church, which has a building on the corner of Fletcher and Powers streets, has been without a pastor for two years, the pulpit having been supplied by the Congregational Home Missionary society. The missionary in Boston, having been called to another charge, and there having been an average attendance of only 8 to 10 members, the secretary of the society, Rev. Dr. Emerich, has heartily endorsed the plan to unite the two French Protestant churches, especially as he now finds it impossible to supply the pulpit of the Congregational church.

The French Baptist church is located at the corner of Enfield and West Sixth streets and its pastor is Rev. E. C. Hammett.

Until the question of location is settled the two congregations will worship in their respective churches.

Smoke Nuisance

Smoke Inspector John F. Hollowood has issued an annual report and it's quite some affair, too. John knows a whole lot about smoke and he isn't the least bit stingy with his knowledge either. He knows smoke from the T. B. to the mill chimney.

In his summary he states: "The work done during the past 12 months shows not only a very marked improvement in the methods of proceeding against the smoke nuisance, but also, points out the activity on the part of the principal manufacturers to cooperate with this department in the campaign for pure air. The work done summarized is as follows:

Total observations: 1765; verbal complaints: 2200; written complaints: received, 181; notices of violations, sent out, 750; replies to same, received, 755; visits to factories, 600; factories installing smoke preventers, 18; smoke devices, passed, 4.

Preparations Are Started for the Big International Polo Match Between the American and Hurlingham Teams

Harry Payne Whitney has again demonstrated that he is a good sportsman. Reports have been floating around and stories printed that the captain of the international polo team has decided to retire from the field on international engagements. To a certain extent these stories may have been true, inasmuch as Mr. Whitney may have expressed a desire to give up polo.

But it is another case of the old war-horse smelling powder, and then again Mr. Whitney saw he was needed so in spite of his personal wishes he has again jumped in and will represent the American team in the coming international matches with Hurlingham.

In a large measure the same program will be followed as regards the selection of the American defending team. Mr. Whitney will be in sole charge, and the various polo association committees will aid him in every way possible.

The pony situation seems particularly bright, and the Meadow Brook side will be mounted every bit as well as in 1911. The pony committee is composed of Captain John C. Groome, Philadelphia; Louis E. Stoddard, New Haven; R. L. Agassiz, Boston and W. J. Hazard. All the players whose ability warrant it will be invited to take part in the preliminary practice matches at Georgian court, the estate of George J. Gould at Lakewood.

While of course it is too early to name any players, it is a safe bet that Monte and Larry Waterbury, Devereaux Milburn, Malcolm Stevenson, Foxhall Keene, R. L. Agassiz and Joshua Crane will be among those who will try for the team.

Little is known about the personnel of the English team which is coming over, but the fact that Walter S. Buckmaster, the finest player in England, will be its captain is sufficient guarantee that it will be about the strongest aggregation the Britishers can get together. The Duke of Westminster, who is financing the trip, is tremendously wealthy and if reports are true has secured a bunch of mounts which are equal, if not better, than those which will be ridden by the American team. Money has been an object in securing ponies for the English team.

Eight or ten of the foremost players in England, from which the team and substitutes will be selected, have been playing in the south of France and will continue practice throughout the winter, probably in Egypt, which has a warm climate and where polo is extremely popular with the English and French sportsmen who winter there.

Other men who have been mentioned as coming over here on the team are Captain Leslie St. George Cheape, who played No. 1 in the 1911 matches; Major Risson, Captain Belleville, F. M. Freake and Lord Wedenhouse. These men are among the best in England.

Large audiences who have attended the performances at the Merrimack Square theatre this week have pronounced the bill one of the best given at this theatre since its formal opening three seasons ago.

The Temple Players in "The Rye in Scotland" are scoring the biggest hit of their career. Friday evening, Jan. 3 will be their 175th performance in this theatre and will be designated anniversary night, when every person holding a reserved ticket will be given a Player souvenir.

Harry LeClair is presenting a most unique act and is making a great hit with his audiences. His work is a feature of the program. The other acts and the photo plays are among the best seen at the theatre this season.

Bell's Theatre

"The Fighter and the Boss," the front rank attraction at the Bell's Theatre, this week, is a sterling little play, with the nearest kind of a good moral to it. Sullivan and Harding play the two parts and deliver them in a clean cut manner. Don't miss this play. It leaves a good feeling in one after witnessing it. There are seven other kinds of good things on the bill, notably so being the exhibition by Loughlin's for terriers. The remaining acts are: Eddie Howard, acrobat; Church sisters, dancers; Cavana duo, mirthmakers; Goldie & Pearson, whistlers, etc.; Sevens & Erwood, black-face comedians, and the Four Laurel Girls, instrumentalists. HARRY LECLAIR AS "OPHELIA," Merrimack Square This Week one of the principal parts in "The Wife" this week's play, he treated two good sized audiences to first class presentations of that remarkable drama yesterday afternoon and night.

"The Wife" demands some fine scenic arrangements and this was well met with at the Playhouse for the staging of the piece was superb, as has always been the case at Mr. Weston's theatre. The play itself is a comedy drama and about the delightful story in woven a thread of the finest humor, pleasing to any audience. The husband of a young woman has been placed in a false light by one who is desirous of giving the wife a false impression and it is about this that the plot centers, interesting throughout.

J. Anthony Smythe is up to his usual high standard in the part of Senator John Rutherford and his portrayal of the difficult character was delightful. "The Wife" is Miss Constance Jackson, a great favorite with theatre goers of this city and she moved herself capably of bringing out the title role to the full advantage. The beautiful gowns of Miss Grace Young are an ever pleasing feature of the Playhouse performances, especially to the ladies of the audience and last night she gave the people a treat in the line of wonderful costumes.

Mr. Isaac Dillon, who on Monday night was stricken down with a severe attack of appendicitis, was back in the east last evening and in usual a big favorite with all. Mr. Dillon's naturalness in acting every manner of part is a most desirable quality and a rare one. It was certainly appreciated by all who have seen him act here.

Following the performance the men in the orchestra were invited to remain and enjoy an informal reception with the male members of the Drama Players and this proved to be a very pleasing affair. Stories were told, refreshments served and all day long an excellent concert of music. The members of the company helped to greet the New Year at the stroke of 12 by the blowing of horns and cheering. Performances of "The Wife" every afternoon and evening during the remainder of the week.

NO ONE HELPED HIM

Pomeroy Says He Made Implement

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—Jesse Pomeroy broke his silence last evening and talked to Warden Bridges, who, with Deputy Warden Allen, spent ten minutes with him in the "Blue room" of "Cherry Hill," where he has been confined since he was captured in the corridor at 210 Monday morning by Guard Thomas E. Brassil after escaping from his cell.

Pomeroy told the warden that no sympathizer furnished him with the tools with which he cut three steel bars of his cell door. He stubbornly insisted that he personally made the implement used and that he destroyed it, fragment by fragment, several days before he left the cell. He said he put the fragments in the toilet bowl.

Neither the warden nor deputy believe the story. They cannot conceive of any way that Pomeroy could have constructed an instrument of sufficient power to cut the bars. They are still of the opinion that he was given a drill for which they will continue to search "Cherry Hill" and "Fort Russell."

About 25 cells in "Cherry Hill" were inspected yesterday without results and 35 more remain to be looked over. If this work is finished without finding the much sought for tools, the investigation will be continued in "Fort Russell."

Warden Bridges and the other prison officials yesterday admitted that Pomeroy may have been out of his cell before Monday morning for the purpose of passing the tools into the cell of an accomplice or sympathizer.

If this was not done, they feel confident that they were taken from Pomeroy's cell by an accomplice some time before Monday morning.

Last night an extra guard was assigned to duty in "Cherry Hill." For half an hour yesterday afternoon Pomeroy walked about the little brick-walled enclosed yard connected with the "Blue room" in company with a guard. He was in good humor and apparently enjoyed the outing.

MORE HARD COAL COMING

Shipments Better, Says Prominent Dealer—Price May Be Cut in January If Weather Is Mild

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—Hard coal is coming in better now, according to a prominent dealer, who said yesterday that owing to the activity of the Delaware & Hudson lines in shipping coal over the Boston & Maine to northern New England there is some relief in the situation. He declared that the price of coal is likely to be cut by the middle of January if the weather conditions remain fairly mild.

The local dealers are paying the mine operators 25 cents more a ton for hard coal than for 16 years previous, and in Boston, where most of it comes by the water route, there is an additional charge this year of about 15 cents a ton, he said.

One result which may come from the scarcity and high price of hard coal, the dealers say, is discontinuance of the custom of permitting people to order coal in the spring or summer for delivery at summer prices. If this change is made, current prices at the time of delivery will be charged. This change, it was said, will save large amounts of interest on money heretofore tied up for several months because of this practice.

THE HOLY CROSS DANCE

Delightful Event Graced Associate Hall

MANY OUT-OF-TOWN PEOPLE AMONG PATRONS

The Hall Presented a Beautiful Appearance—The Affair One of Lowell's Foremost Social Events

"A brilliant success" is the most concise description that can be given of the annual dancing party of the Lowell club of Holy Cross at Worcester, which was enjoyed by a large attendance in Associate hall last evening.

Not long ago, Lowell young people were wondering and inquiring whether or not the Holy Cross boys were to conduct a dancing party, and it was with genuine pleasure that former patrons and others received the announcement that it was the intention of the Lowell students to act the part of host once more. New Year's eve was looked forward to with joyful anticipation, and when the time finally arrived last night, a large gathering of friends of the college organization was present to dance to the excellent music furnished by Miner's orchestra.

The spirit with which the committee entered into the preparations for this annual affair was most commendable; far from being a case of mere advertising and selling of tickets, the hiring of a body of musicians, and the securing of the hall, the Holy Cross dance was on the contrary the result of many weeks of hard and earnest work on the part of those who were in charge of the arrangements. Some time ago, hundreds of neatly gotten up invitations were received in Lowell, addressed by the committee of the Holy Cross and to graduates of the 48 states on the Union and the insular possessions, a gift from former Postmaster General Wauwauk to President Taft, were contained in the first package to be sent by parcels post from Philadelphia.

The clock on Independence hall had just struck the hour marking the close of the old year when Postmaster Smith started the package on its journey. It was placed aboard the mail car of the 12:15 train for Washington.

An elaborate reception attended by prominent state and city officials, preceded the despatching of the package. Mr. Wauwauk, who advocated the creation of a parcels post in 1899, in his first annual report as postmaster-general to President Harrison, in an address spoke of his gratitude for the opportunity of participating in the opening of the system. He declared that under Postmaster General Hitchcock's proclamation 100,000,000 of the people of the United States are emancipated from the bondage of express companies.

J. BRUCE ISMAY RESIGNS

As Manager of the White Star Line

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The long-expected resignation of J. Bruce Ismay from his position as chairman and managing director of the White Star Line was announced yesterday. It will take effect June 30. Harold A. Sanderson, first vice-president of the International Mercantile Marine Company and director of the White Star Line, will succeed Mr. Ismay.

A statement issued by the company says that it was arranged last February that Mr. Ismay should retire on June 30, 1913, and that nothing had occurred to make it necessary to depart from that understanding.

The statement added that the company had decided that Mr. Sanderson might take a vacation for the first half of the year.

Although Mr. Ismay resigns as chairman of the White Star, he continues as a director of the International Mercantile Marine and a member of the British committee and retains the chairmanship of the Asiatic Steamship Company and the Liverpool and London Steamship Protective Association.

Gift from Ex-Postmaster General Wauwauk First Parcel Post Package Sent at Philadelphia

NINE ENTOMBED IN MINE

Men Trapped in East Lehigh Colliery, Tamaqua, Pa., by High Water and Mass of Rock

TAMAQUA, Pa., January 1.—Nine mine workers are entombed in a flooded working in the East Lehigh Colliery. Rescuers are digging away a mass of culm and rock which is blocking the gangway leading to the imprisoned men. Rappings from the interior of the mine show that some, if not all, the imprisoned miners are still alive.

The men were caught in the rush of water when they accidentally broke through the wall of an abandoned working. Three men escaped by wading through water waist deep, but when an attempt was made to reach the others it was discovered that the passageway was filled with culm and rock washed down by the escaping stream.

It will require 24 hours to reach the entombed men.

Liggett's
AMERICA'S GREATEST DRUG STORES

Throwing Out All Liquors!

On December 1st LIGGETT'S HALL & LYON STORES throughout Rhode Island and Massachusetts announced that hereafter they would not sell any intoxicating liquors, except on physicians' prescriptions.

This was the preliminary to the following more general announcement.

LIGGETT'S today announce another important step forward:

From this date no intoxicating liquors of any kind will be sold in any Liggett Store in the United States or Canada.

This policy is new only so far as it becomes general, covering our entire retail organization of fifty-five stores.

It has been our purpose from the beginning. None of the new Liggett Stores has ever sold liquor—and in the older stores we have taken over, we have been discontinuing the business as rapidly as conditions permitted.

This move we believe to be in the line of modern store-keeping, a step in the transition of the old-time pharmacy into "AMERICA'S GREATEST DRUG STORES."

Selling liquor in bulk in drug stores for medicinal purposes is sanctioned by law and usage in most states.

It has been considered a necessary part of the pharmacy, most druggists conducting the business honorably.

We have no criticism to make of what has been done—or what is being done. Each druggist must be a judge of the needs of his own business and the demands of his particular locality.

But this we know—The day of the old-time drug store, with its air of mystery, its high prices, its green and red bottle windows is passing.

The modern druggist is a merchant who carries many lines.

His store is for healthy people as well as for sick ones—a cheerful store to go to.

The modern drug store, as exemplified by Liggett's, caters especially to women and children. But the druggist being a pharmacist holds, in addition, a more intimate and confidential relation to his patrons than any other merchant enjoys.

The modern drug store—as we see it, must be a leader in every way, especially in the matter of health and morals—a store whose methods are beyond criticism.

The broadening of drug store lines has brought lower prices as a matter of course—and while every expense known to storekeeping has increased, drug store prices today are less than they have been any time in a century.

Sometimes the "pull-backs" criticize the modern druggists as unethical.

We mean to make it known that on all ethical matters Liggett's-America's Greatest Drug Stores will take the most advanced position possible to take.

We shall refuse to sell liquors just as we long ago refused to sell habit-forming drugs or anything to be used for questionable purposes, not waiting for such things to be forbidden by law.

We have already received enough letters of approval from all over the United States to be assured that the steps we are taking have the unqualified endorsement of thinking people.

Liggett's shall be America's Greatest Drug Stores in fact as well as in name.

engine house, he made merry early in the night and just as he was partaking of his ice cream and shortly after he had entertained with some original numbers, the ball dropped in response to an alarm summoning the fire department to a blaze at the Richardson Manufacturing company plant, which is but a few blocks from the engine house. Lucier was among the first to enter the burning building and had reached the third floor, on which the fire was raging, when he collapsed. His comrades picked him up and carried him to the street.

Dr. George H. Hill, fire department physician, examined the stricken man and announced that he was in a critical condition. Rev. John F. Spellman of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, who happened by, administered the last rites of the Catholic church before Lucier was placed in the ambulance and rushed to his home at 24 Belmont street. He expired just as he was being removed from the ambulance. With his last breath the recall for the fire sounded.

For 12 years Lucier had answered alarms of fire in this city and was one of the best known fire fighters in Worcester county. During the past few years he was troubled with heart affection, and it is thought that death was caused by apoplexy, superinduced by heart trouble. The fire which started, it is thought, in only waste, threatened the entire upper floors of the building, and when the department arrived flames were bursting from the windows. Several lines were laid, and within half an hour the flames were subdued. The loss was estimated, late last night at about $500.

THREE DOLLARS PER YEAR. TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER MONTH

PROSPEROUS YEAR FOR LOWELL

The past year has been a prosperous one for the city of Lowell. The increase in property shown in the new buildings erected has been above the average and the buildings have shown a decided step forward. The location of the city is one of the best in the country, and the location here of a rubber factory, a silk mill, a mill, a new factory, the highway commission repair shop, and several other factories that although of moderate size to begin with, give promise of rapid growth. Several of the local mills have built important additions and altogether there has been a very busy year in the industrial operations throughout the city.

The labor strike that for a time threatened consequences quite as serious as those of the Lawrence strike was settled by the grant of a liberal increase of wages without prolonged delay.

For a presidential year, 1912 was remarkably free from anything resembling industrial stagnation. All classes and all parties seemed to have full confidence in the business stability of the future.

Lowell, therefore, starts the New Year under the most favorable auspices and with the brightest outlook enjoyed for years. It is to be hoped that those who have been striving for a bigger, better and busier Lowell will continue the good work so that many of the projects now under consideration will be carried to complete success. Among these are the completion of the down-river boulevard, the movement to make the Merrimack river navigable, to increase the number and diversity of her industries, to give her more beautiful buildings, better streets, better parks and better conveniences for the people in every line of activity.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES BILL

The incoming state legislature will have to deal with some form of a bill for the investigation and settlement of industrial disputes. The Boston Chamber of Commerce has been working hard to provide some equitable method of investigation and settlement of such disputes. Its efforts have been directed mainly towards the settlement of labor troubles in public service corporations, such as street railways, steam railroads, express companies, steamship lines, etc. It is very strange if some better plan cannot be provided than that offered by the present board of arbitration and conciliation. This board has practically outlived its usefulness. It has exerted very little influence for good during the past half-dozen years, and the sooner it is abolished the better.

A bill modeled after Canadian law, it seems, would be permissible here. This makes a strike and a lockout illegal, until the trouble be thoroughly investigated and reported upon by a state board. It seems, in the interests of the public at large, that such a restriction upon the action of employers and employees would be entirely warranted. The matter of constitutionality is a great barrier to following the lines of the Canadian law, as the parties under our constitution stand upon their respective rights regardless of consequences. But this is a case in which the public should have some consideration.

Some of the heads of the public service corporations, including President Sullivan of the Bay State Street Railway, are strongly opposed to the bill proposed by the Boston Chamber of Commerce. In this they may be justified, but in any case, it is well that the measure be thoroughly discussed before being submitted to the legislature.

THE SUCTION SHUTTLE

The old suction shuttle used in the mills for generations is now barred by law, and the mills are expected to equip as soon as possible with anti-suction shuttles. The objection to the suction shuttle is that it is likely to convey disease in being put to the mouths of different people. In three days of inventive genius, it is indeed strange if no proper substitute for the old suction shuttle can be found. Fortunately there is slight excuse for maintaining the old style shuttle, as there are no less than a score of self-suctioning shuttles, all of them having more or less merit. At the same time, and such is the old shuttle, it is a seemingly unimportant part of the loom, yet it is difficult to change it with complete success. Some of the new style shuttles are not quite so easily threaded as the old, and it will take some time, on only a few shuttles with the new shuttle, but it is to be hoped that the new shuttle will be to the satisfaction of all. We do not believe that there is any disposition to hurry the mills unnecessarily on this matter, but if the old shuttle be replaced by the new self-suctioning shuttle without any great loss or serious inconvenience either to the manufacturer or the operative, we believe the results will be largely beneficial to both.

Seen and Heard

Stick to your New Year resolutions!

The unhappy are always wrong; wrong in being so, wrong in saying so, wrong in needing help of others.

Fight when you are down; die hard—determine at least to do—and you won't die at all.

Call upon a business man in business hours. State your business in a business way; use your own words; be business matters; go about your business and leave the business man to attend to his business.

It has been said that he has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men, and the love of little children, who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved penny, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty, or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in other people, and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration; whose memory a benediction.

THE SONG ON THE WAY

Any way the old world goes
Happy be the weather!
With the red there of the rose
Sing! all together, make
Don't you see that sky of blue?
Good Lord painted it for you!
Reap the daisies in the dew
Sing! all together
Springtime sweet, a frosty fall
Happy be the weather!
Earth has gardens for us all,
Sweet the labor in the night,
To the harvest's gold and white—
Till the tollers say "Good night!"
Sing! all together.

On New Year's Resolutions

I suppose you've been so busy exchanging the useless presents you got for Christmas, that you haven't had time to think of making any New Year resolutions. I'm going to give some advice on this matter, because, really, even though these cottages are New Year resolutions, it's kind of fascinating to see how soon you can break them, don't you think so, for of course it is nothing short of a social error to keep one.

Some perfectly good resolutions that look nice when written on the first page of your new 1913 diary, are: "You ought to know them" as you have written them often enough. Write those things if you want, but don't be so utterly foolish as to try them. The men vow by all the stars above to keep on the water-wagon during the new year. Usually they don't even go to the trouble of holding the non-alcoholic paraphernalia. The men set the fashion of breaking good resolutions, and it's up to the women to follow the example of the lords of creation. Don't mistake my meaning. I am not insinuating that women quaff the stuff that cheers.

Personally, I think this custom of resolving impossible things is a relic of medieval days. It isn't progressive enough for this modern age. But if you insist on making some, at least have them original. Here are a few timely hints.
For Married Women—Resolved, that I will be the boss of this house. That I want some new clothes, and I'm going to get them. That I shall make my husband be in his house every night at nine o'clock. That if I desire a few tons of false hair and a complexion that comes off, I shall have them. In spite of my husband's opposition. That I wear alone a size too small for me, and shall continue to do so. That I shall invite my relatives to spend a few months with us. That my husband shall get his own breakfast after this—I need my beauty sleep in the morning.
For Cooks—Resolved, that I will make a delectable without a hole in it; that I will eat a pure food label on hash, stating as many of its ingredients as I can remember; that I will make no more imitation leather pie crust.

For Jesse Pomroy—Resolved, that I will do a better job next time.
For the Dynamiters—Resolved, that when we come out, we'll go into a more peaceful line of work.
For Spinsters—Resolved, that I will propose in 1916, if no one asks me before then.

For the Suffragettes—Resolved, that, since walking along the Hudson imitates our complexion, we will try similar stunts all over the country, besides making fools of ourselves in other ways.
For the "White Hoops"—Resolved, that we'll put Johnson out of commission this year, or die in the attempt.
For the Lowell Sun—Resolved, that since it is very pleasant to be up in the city, we will let good Christian lives in the hope that when we die, we'll be elevated a little bit more.

WORD TO THE BACHELORS

Sympathy for These Lone Wanderers

These remarks are intended for bachelors, confirmed or otherwise, who somehow fail to come to the front. They have the right idea in Ireland. Have you read about the summary action taken in a certain town in County Meath? It seems that many of the best cottages in Dunlaugh were under town control; these cottages were occupied by bachelors, and numerous complaints were brought to the town authorities by people who objected to the fact that each of these cottages had only one occupant, when they should have two or more. So the town authorities issued the stern decree that the bachelors must marry or move. The cottages must have been very comfortable abodes, because most of the bachelors obeyed the decree in double quick time.

Why don't the Lowell municipal council adopt some measure like that? There are too many bachelors in this burg, and no excuse whatever for such a state of affairs. With all the pretty girls in Lowell, who were too shy to take advantage of Leap Year, and prefer to wait until they're asked. There are plenty of Lowell bachelors who are willing, but there are even more who are not.

If the girls won't do anything about it, or if their efforts prove unavailing, let the city council be so kind as to pass a law that says: "Marry or Move," but they could lower the pay of the city employees who are still bachelors, or they could impose a heavy tax on the unmarried, or make them, under compulsion, wear a placard, bearing the red-lettered announcement, "Do you want a husband?" These suggestions may seem childish to the proposed sufferers, but it is a case where it is "kind to be cruel."

There are three kinds of men in this world: those who are born and stay single; those who acquire wives, and those who have wives thrust upon them. It is to weep when one thinks of the first class. The second class is composed of the salt of the earth. In the third class, we hope, are the Lowell bachelors—they haven't the courageous spirit of the second class, but otherwise they are normal human beings. It isn't their fault if they don't realize the happiness they are missing, and it would be a great charity to thrust that happiness upon them.

The bachelors themselves would tell you that this marriage stuff is all bosh. "None of that for mine." Poor, deluded creatures, trying to persuade themselves that they believe what they say. You know, they don't—they are really consumed with envy for their married friends, and long to become benefitted themselves, but as I said before, they lack the courage. And it's surprising how many of these non-courageous ones there are in Lowell. Such an institution as the Waverly Orphans, for instance. The orphans ought to be ashamed of themselves, and instead of parading the fact that they are bachelors, they ought to hunt up a future Mrs. Who would show them that a Christmas dinner, cooked by a wife's fair hands, is far superior even to the Waverly's generous repast. It puzzles me that in this modern town there can be men who are so unenlightened as to boast that they are bachelors. There's our friend Bill, a prominent member of the orphans. He has a confirmed case of bacheloritis, but he isn't past redemption, for he was heard lamenting, the day before Christmas, that he had no Mrs. Bill to buy a present for. The sad tones in which he made this remark aroused our suspicion, but he will give him the benefit of the doubt. Here's a Happy New Year to him and all the orphans—a Happy New Year, and best wishes for a speedy marriage.

"USE MY NAME TO END"

Guild's Hat in the Ring for Senator

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—Charles S. Baxter of Medford last evening made public a message which, under date of Dec. 31, he received from Curtis Guild. The Russian ambassador reiterates that he has authorized the use of his name as a candidate for the United States senatorship. He tells Mr. Baxter to use his name in this connection "to the end."

It was announced yesterday at Ex-Gov. Draper's headquarters that Mr. Draper would have a statement on the senatorial situation to issue this afternoon. Mr. Draper is quoted as saying that he is entirely satisfied with the outlook as far as his own chances are concerned.

The following is the statement given out by Mr. Baxter last night:
"In reply to a cablegram sent by Charles S. Baxter of Medford to Hon. Curtis Guild, ambassador to Russia, inquiring as to whether Ambassador Guild had definitely authorized the use of his name as a candidate for the United States senatorship, Mr. Baxter received the following cablegram: 'St. Petersburg, Russia, Dec. 31, 1912. Charles S. Baxter, Boston—I have already authorized the use of my name as a candidate for the United States senatorship, since you and others identified in the reforms in which we have worked together believe such use will further these and similar causes. Use my name and to the end. I cannot return personally to enter the contest, as I am bound in honor to remain in Russia until March 1.'"

AN OLD TIME WELCOME

Boston Celebrates the New Year

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—Boston's biggest, noisiest and most picturesque greeting of the advent of a new year welcomed 1913 with the blare of trumpets, the screech of whistles, choral singing of patriotic airs, swarms of cheering and mildly riotous folks on the streets, hundreds of confetti-strewn, tangled, laughing and happy diners in the big hotels, and thousands of the quietest and more serious-minded gathered together in watch meetings in places of religious worship.

Never before in the history of the town has there been seen anything approaching the congestion of automobiles and the size of the street crowds. Long before the theatres closed Tremont and Washington streets were almost impassable with parked automobiles and carriages. From Boylston to Park street, along both sides of Tremont street, thousands of automobiles stood against both curbs waiting for the theatregoers. Between the two long lines of gleaming headlights and on the sidewalk and mall enormous crowds moved slowly along, utilizing the middle of the street, sweeping through the wire barriers on the inside of the Lafayette mall walk and forming almost a solid mass from the easterly side of Tremont street to the parade ground on the common. Women were chosen to the ground and trampled in the rush.

With the closing of the theatres there was indescribable confusion in the hotel and theatre district. Automobiles found it almost impossible to make their way to the theatre doors through the congestion. Hotel lobbies were packed to suffocation, and even the fortunate folk who held reservations of tables had to execute intricate football manoeuvres to gain entrance.

It was a good-natured and happy throng, prone to cheering and horn-toting on the slightest or no provocation.

THE OLD AND THE NEW

Elks Watched Old Year Out and New Year in

The Lowell Elks held open house last night and their headquarters in Middle street presented a merry scene. Everybody knows that B. P. O. E. stands for "best people on earth," and that goes, too. There wasn't anything good for the Elks or their friends last night. Between a song and a story they laid the old year a kindly farewell and bid the new year a hearty welcome. They had seen the sun set on the old year, set and leave behind, that good old year, and dear old time, but, with all their fondness for the old year they said farewell and bidding the threshold to another year, pledged greater friendship and greater concern for the happiness of others, for the Elks are the boys who know that joy does not happen. They know that joy is the inevitable result of certain lines followed and laws obeyed and so a matter of character. The Elks show true bravery by performing without witnesses what the ostentations might be capable of doing before all the world.

There was a musical at 10 o'clock and in this the members were assisted by talent from Keith's theatre. The entire program was impromptu and every Elk called upon seized common occasion for the Elk never waits for extraordinary opportunity.

When the hour of 11 o'clock pointed to 11 o'clock the mystic hour of the Elks, the big Elk star shone forth and then came the toast to absent brethren. This was an impressive moment and the men who believe that the best preacher is the heart; the best teacher, time; the best book, the world; the best friend, God; gave the toast with all sincerity of soul and honor.

At 12 o'clock the hour when graveyards yawn, a toast was given to the New Year and all sat down to an elaborate banquet. There were toasts to those present and absent and they were good toasts, too. Here's a sample and if we mistake not it's the voice of Oliver Wendell Holmes:

Fast as the rolling seasons bring
The hour of fate to those we love,
Each pearl that leaves the broken string
Is set in friendship's crown above.
As new year grows the earthly chain,
The circle widens in the sky,
These are our treasures that remain,
But these are stars that beam on high.
The good time lasted into the small wee hours and the occasion was one

PEACE CONFERENCE INTERRUPTED

Bulgarian Delegate Stated That He Would Inform Authorities That War Will be Resumed

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The meeting of other questions in dispute should be submitted to the great European powers. The envoys of Bulgaria, Greece, Montenegro and Serbia rose in indignation and volubly protested against this trifling by Turkey. Madjaroff took the lead in the protest by declaring that the action of the Turks was indecent. It was, he said, an insult to bring the peace delegates to London simply to tell them to leave everything to be settled by the European powers. M. Madjaroff then quit the hall. The other delegates afterward informally discussed the matters before the conference and spent some time in drawing up minutes of the proposals that had been laid before them.

LAST NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION

To Pres. Taft Was Attended by Thousands of People at Washington Today

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—President Taft's fourth and last New Year's reception at the White House was greeted by a day beautiful and bright. Thousands early turned in the direction of the executive mansion. Long before the time at which the chief executive was ready to shake hands with every citizen who cared to avail himself of the privilege, a line of men, women and children extended in the front door of the White House to the distant gate and far beyond towards the state, war and navy building. The president and Mrs. Taft prepared at 11 o'clock to wish a happy New Year first to members of the cabinet and their wives and to the diplomatic corps; these followed by the members of the supreme court and by the judges of the other courts here; then former cabinet officers, ambassadors and ministers; next members of congress, then the army and navy and marine corps officers after which came a long line of government officials, members of commissions, members of the G. A. R. and a number of other military societies.

TO INAUGURATE FOSS
Governor Begins Third Term Tomorrow

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—With several months of important work in prospect, the Massachusetts legislature, officially known as the general court, convened today for its 141st annual session. Both branches are strongly republican. All the officers of last year were re-elected. Levi C. Greenwood of Gardner began his second term as president of the senate and Grafton Cushing of Boston was chosen speaker of the house for the third time. More than 100 measures, many of them dealing with railroad transportation which is expected to be one of the leading issues this year, were on file with the clerks when the two branches met. The number was considerably augmented before noon and there were indications of a record-breaking number of bills, resolves and petitions before the expiration of the time limit for new business on Jan. 15. Gov. Foss will be inaugurated for a third term tomorrow.

TAXI DRIVERS HAVE QUIT
8000 Cabs Tied Up by London Strike

LONDON, Jan. 1.—An almost complete tie-up of taxi-cab service was experienced today when the drivers carried out their strike they voted last night. It was estimated that 8,000 taxi cabs stood idle in their garages during the day, the only taxis being the few owned by individual drivers. All of the taxi-cab companies from the largest to the smallest were affected, although they declared they had the names of many strike-breakers who would relieve the situation.

GOODBY 1912—WELCOME 1913

Goodby, old year! the time has come
When you and I must part.
For the good things that you brought me
I thank you from my heart.

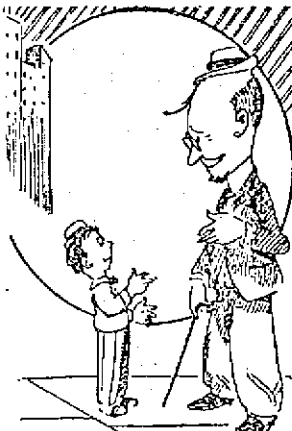

I welcome you, Nineteen-Thirteen
I'm pleased as I can be
At what you seem to have in store;
For you look good to me.

KIND OF HIM.
Teacher—Well, Earlie Slack, you are late again this morning. When I have a few moments to spare I shall chastise you severely.
Earlie Slack—Please don't hurry yourself, teacher. I can wait.

A LOW JOKE.
"That front-row girl has a very warm heart, don't you think?"
"I should like to see it. It doesn't appear to need any covering."

HE ESCAPED IN TIME.
"There has been a conflagration here!" said Guyer, looking at a tall building.
"How do you know?" asked Dyer.
"I saw the fire escape."

POSSIBLY.
"Why are cities referred to in feminine always?"
"It may be because some of them paid their figures."

TRUE ENOUGH.
"Here is an account of a man marrying a woman he had known only one day."
"That's a long time; sometimes a man never knows the woman he marries."

SAY SO.
"Wife—Henry, will you come with me to pick out my fall hat?"
"Hubby—I'd feel so ashamed."
"Wife—Oh! I'll pick one that you'll never need to be ashamed of."

French American Clubs Pay Tribute to Xavier A. Delisle, Secretary to Congressmen-Elect Rogers

XAVIER A. DELISLE,
Secretary to Congressmen-Elect Rogers

HON. JOHN JACOB ROGERS,
Congressman-Elect

POSTMASTER J. A. LEGARE,
Postmaster

The French American clubs of the city last night tendered Xavier A. Delisle a complimentary banquet on the occasion of his recent appointment as private secretary to Congressman-elect John Jacob Rogers, as a token of esteem and appreciation presented him a solid gold watch. The festivities were held in C. M. A. C. hall in Pawtucket street and were attended by about 200 young men, all desirous to congratulate their friend and extend him their best wishes. The affair was organized by a committee composed of members of the C. M. A. C., Clotys-American, Centralville and Pawtucketville Social clubs. The evening was an appropriate one for the occasion and at the close of the program all present, seated in the New Year by exchanging greetings and best wishes.

The hall was beautifully decorated with multi-colored streamers, while the stage and festive boards were decked with palms and flowers. The back ground of the stage was decorated with large American and French flags, while seated in the midst of a real palm garden was the C. M. A. C. orchestra which rendered excellent music under the leadership of Joseph Chouinard, Jr.

Representative Henri Achin, Jr., chairman of the organizing committee, presided, while Postmaster Joseph A. Legare, who ten years ago was the object of a similar demonstration, when he was appointed private secretary to Congressman Butler Ames, acted as toastmaster. There were speeches by Rev. O. M. L., pastor of St. Joseph's parish, who responded to the toast "The Clergy"; Congressman John Jacob Rogers, "The United States"; Representative Victor F. Jewett, "The Commonwealth"; Mayor James E. Donnell, "The City of Lowell"; Rev. C. Bédard, assistant pastor of St. Louis church, "The Functions of the Young Folk"; and Rev. J. B. A. Barrette, O. M. L., assistant pastor of Notre Dame de Lourdes church, "Our Societies."

At the conclusion of a delightful repast, the guests were welcomed to order and in a brief address welcomed the guests and explained the purpose of the gathering, paying a compliment to the secretary and to the congressman for his judicious choice. He spoke on the opportunities a young man has in this world, and he said he hoped would not stop until he has reached the summit of the ladder. He said the gathering was the second of its kind for the past ten years, the other having been in honor of the present postmaster, and concluded by wishing Mr. Delisle, whose he said he had known for many years, the success of his new position. He then introduced Mr. Legare as toastmaster, and the latter was given a real ovation.

The toastmaster spoke briefly on the duties of a congressman's secretary, saying the position required study and hard work. He said the secretary's first duties in Washington would be to meet the other 600 secretaries, and said for the first year he would be kept working almost day and night, as he would have to reply to at least 500 correspondence daily, but he said he felt confident that Mr. Delisle will fill the position in a very satisfactory manner, and he closed by offering his assistance to the new secretary at any time it may be needed.

He then introduced the first speaker, Rev. Henri Watelle, O. M. L., who spoke in part as follows:

Called as I am to respond to the toast "The Clergy" I wish above all to thank the members of the organization committee for their invitation to be present at the celebration and be one of the speakers as well. As this gathering is a family gathering for the purpose of congratulating one of our citizens you figured that the family would not be complete if the clergy did not have its place amidst the gathering.

You decided that as the priest was the father and director of the souls, that he would understand your joys and would join in the celebration and at the same time his voice would be heard to congratulate also and you are not mistaken. The clergy of the parish thank you, and by taking this action, you have conformed with an old Canadian tradition which relates that the priest or clergyman should partake in the joys where there is joy and grief where there is grief. One way of considering the clergyman is to see in his presence, the image of God, his representative, the director of all souls, and honor him as such. Sisters, members of the organization committee, you have acted in this fashion, and I congratulate you. Besides acting in that fashion you have conformed your self with the program of the C. M. A. C., of which Mr. Xavier Delisle, whom we are now congratulating, was one of the best presidents.

Mr. Xavier Delisle, in behalf of the clergy of St. Joseph's parish, I extend my sincerest wishes and congratulations to you.

The next speaker was Congressman-elect John Jacob Rogers, who was received with tumultuous applause. He opened his remarks by giving two toasts, one to Congressman Butler Ames, and the other to Postmaster Joseph A. Legare. The speaker responded to the toast "The United States" and spoke as follows:

The toast to which your toastmaster permits me to respond is the greatest and noblest in our temporal world.

"The United States." These three words convey, perhaps, a different shade of meaning to every man in this room, and yet they carry to all alike a thrill of pride and of exaltation as we reflect upon their significance. They typify an asylum for the persecuted, a refuge for the destitute, a haven for the storm-tossed, a land of opportunity for the fortunate and for the unfortunate alike.

I years for ability even inadequately to unfold with you the meaning of these wonderful words. But the gift to do is not mine, and rather than with tears, to seek to fly with fragile wings, I prefer will tread on the ground, more solid, if more prosaic.

In the few words I wish to say to you I shall try earnestly to speak, not from the point of view of a partisan republican, but from that of one who is interested in the political tendencies of today and who hopes to see that solution of the problem pressing upon us which will tell most directly for the best good of our country. I am of course aware that I am speaking to men of all shades of political belief, but as I know I am at the same time speaking to men who are first patriots and then partisans, no apology is needed for some reference to the present condition of the republican party. I suppose we can all agree that representative government thrives best where there are but two great parties. In such a government the popular will has the fullest and freest expression. Practically every man in the half century past, whether a republican or a democrat, would often find some tenet in his own party which he disapproved or some tenet in the other which he preferred. But the average man, realizing that government is necessarily on broad lines and is a rule of the many over masses and not as separate individuals, would strive to balance the good and the evil in each of the two great parties and cast his lot with what is deemed on the whole the better.

And comprehending, too, that the introduction of a new party was often fraught with dangers and disadvantages, which outweighed the good, he would rather seek to save the good and purge out the bad in his party than cast aside good and had alike and form a new party. So much we can as a general proposition, all admit. But within the last six months we have seen the birth of a new party. What was the reason for its birth? For some twenty years the republican party, in the nation as a whole as well as in our own section of the nation, has been paramount. In the main I believe its rule has been beneficent. It might be better said, it has made up of many human beings. It may itself be regarded as human—human in its strength, human in its weakness, and no doubtless error and mistake have crept in. A certain arrogance toward the minority, some indifference or slowness of response to the nation's tedious work, some abuse of power, or grossness of the power entrusted to it, an increasing accretion of the parasites who attach themselves to whatever party is in power, have become manifest. And there is of course no doubt that very many of these in the new movement joined in the sincere, patriotic desire to rid our country of these evils.

What was the result? As we all know, a democratic president, senate and house of representatives were elected, and state after state, deemed safely republican, went into the columns of the democrats. Although I am a staunch republican, I can see a very liberal silver lining to this cloud. Representative government, as I have said, thrives best on two parties. It also thrives best when the party out of power is sufficiently strong to be at all times a menace to the one in power, and when, if the latter is found wanting, the former can be assured that it will be called upon to take the helm. Such a condition sobers each party and forces upon it an appreciation of its responsibility.

The democrats have now been given the control, and the republicans, present and past, are in the seats of the critics. Will these out of power be one party, or two? I have tried to make it clear that the nation's welfare will be best served if they can come together to form one strong, cohesive party, for only thus can the will of the majority of the people express itself, and only thus will there in office fear to the full the consequences of wrongdoing or sloth.

The great political problem today is what to do and how to do it. The republican party an old progressive party can so come together. Few thinking men, whether democrat, republican or progressive but would wish to see a fusion. To my mind the solution is sure and will come speedily. The fundamental difference between a republican and a progressive is slight. The two look at the tariff and the currency question—the great political problems before us—from about the same point of view. They look at the great social, moral, industrial and economic questions from about the same point of view. I think are mainly administrative—that a lawyer would call questions of practice and not questions of substantive law. That is, they concern the methods of party administration and the men put forward in public office. I do not mean to underestimate the great importance of these questions, but I do assert that so far as they exist, they are capable of complete and easy adjustment. I believe, further, that upon most of these alleged differences the rank and file of the progressive and republican parties alike are in complete accord, and that where real differences do exist, they are not vital or matters of conscience, but can readily be waived if thereby the union of the two could be brought about. What then, should be the course of the true republican—the patriotic progressive?

Questions of party administration, of the personnel of committees, of chairmanships, of preferences, should not be weighed too exactly—no man in these days should be a stickler for form at the expense of substance. This suggestion may seem a platitude, but I believe that a large part of the bitterness and cleavage of the last months will, upon analysis, be seen to have originated from just such a cause.

But of greater intrinsic importance than this is the question of those men whom we shall have to represent us. It is apt to result that of two equally desirable men the more available, or the one deemed by the greater number of the more available, is chosen. The equally good or even the better man may in the future as in the past have to be sacrificed to bring about the greater good. I can well conceive that our legislature may—and ought to—elect a United States senator who would not otherwise be its choice, because it sees that by so doing it can join together what has been put asunder. It should consider not merely what a particular candidate is, but what he is thought to be. It must, in other words, at this critical time, not only do no evil, but avoid the appearance of evil. It should number as one of the attributes of fitness the acceptability to what I prefer to call the different wings of the republican party.

And so should we proceed up and down the line. Whenever we can do so without loss of honor, we should seek to reconcile and not antagonize to unite and not sever—to make peace and not war.

Representative Victor F. Jewett, next spoke on "The Commonwealth," and his remarks were as follows:

Mr. Toastmaster, invited guests and friends:

Permit me, if you please, at the outset and before confining myself to the toast assigned me, to express my sincere gratification for the very thoughtful invitation extended me to be present here tonight to give the present here tonight in this banquet in honor of my good friend, Mr. Delisle and which has been so appropriately set for New Year's eve. This is indeed a banquet complimentary to him in the sense of its being entirely demonstrative of the high esteem in which he is held by his large circle of friends. And, gathered as we are, friends among friends, it gives me some little courage for the task set upon me; in that among friends, at least, surely I may pray some degree of leniency with my humble attempts to respond to the toast "To the Commonwealth of Massachusetts" as laid down by Mr. Toastmaster, our worthy postmaster.

And well may one shudder at my task! For when I recall to mind the achievements of the many illustrious sons of the old Bay state, when I pause for a moment to consider the enviable position of prestige occupied by Massachusetts in relation with her now 47 sister states; then it is that, I for one at least, am brought to a true realization of the feebleness of my words to adequately exploit the praises of my home state.

But fortunately, however, one needs but merely to bring them to your attention they are in need of no further introduction. For example, by the business ability of her merchants, Massachusetts stands unexcelled as a textile manufacturing state, by the wisdom of her statesmen, sitting within the councils of our national congress, Massachusetts has attained a foremost position of prestige, which is vigorously upheld by her natural assemblymen. And I am sure we all, particularly those of us, who have grown up as playmates—through school days—to the present time—do know and feel assured that Congressman-elect Rogers, ably assisted by Mr. Delisle will represent us in Washington as commendably in the future as we have been in the past.

In the field of arts and science and literature, also, Massachusetts has brought forth more personages of note than any other state in the Union, and when in the dark peril, the call to arms had been sounded, Massachusetts men were the first to fall in defence of their country—as Abraham Lincoln said, "They gave their lives, that their country might live."

And now in my closing remarks I can think of nothing more suggestive of our own devotion to our home state than is expressed in the few lines of one of Massachusetts' favorite songs, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, who wrote:

Call on, O Ship of State,
Massachusetts strong and great—
Humanity with all its fears,
With all its hopes for future years,
Is with thee, O Ship of State.

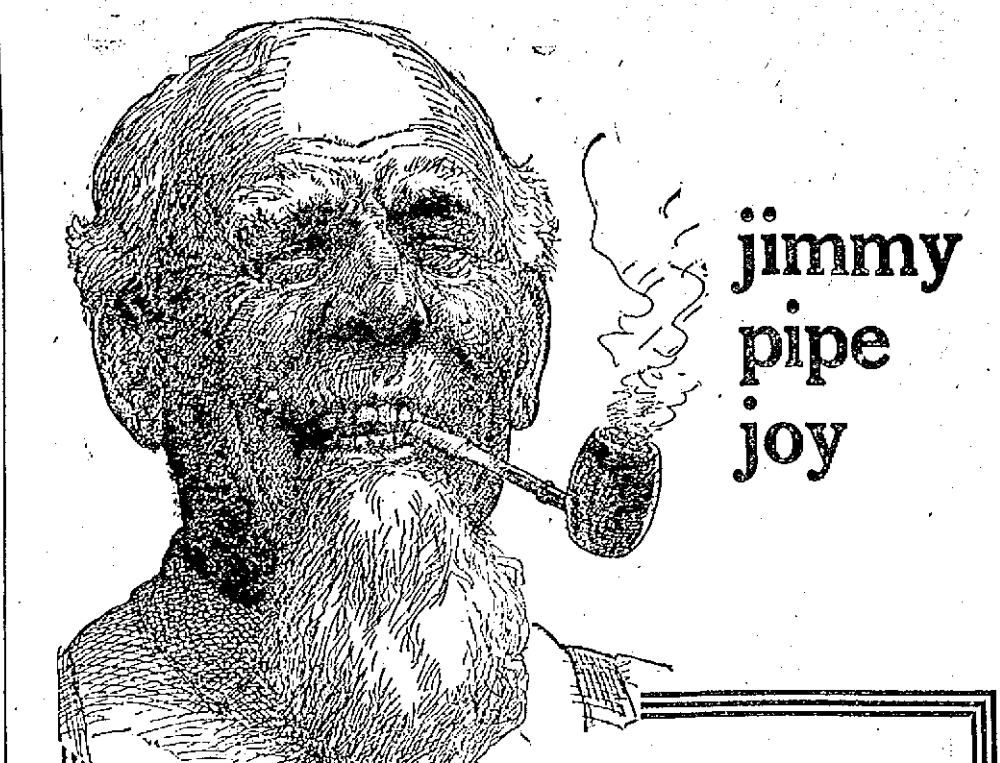

Call on, nor fear to breast the seas;
Our hearts, our hopes are all with thee,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee, O Ship of State.

Mayor O'Donnell's Address

Hon. James E. O'Donnell was then called upon, and after tendering his congratulations and best wishes to the guest of honor said:

Mr. Toastmaster and gentlemen of the C. M. A. C. It affords me great pleasure to be present on this occasion and in with you in extending best wishes to the guest of the evening, Mr. Delisle, who is about to enter upon a most interesting career of public life. I congratulate him most sincerely and wish him unbounded success and I also congratulate the congressman-elect upon his evident good judgment in making his selection.

The appointment of Mr. Delisle, the son of an adopted citizen, to a post at the nation's capital is another evidence of the opportunities afforded in this great country. Here, there is room for all and room for every industry. Any stranger coming to our shores, if possessed of ability, industry and perseverance, may rise from the position in which he finds himself to any position in the land. We offer an asylum and a home to every man of foreign birth who chooses to come here and settle on our soil. After a few years' residence we make him a citizen endowed with all the rights possessed by any of us, except, perhaps, that of being elected to the presidency of the United States. There is no privilege possessed by a native that the adopted citizen has not. Citizenship imposes obligations which must be fulfilled by the adopted as well as the native-born citizen, and while many adopted citizens wrongfully claim rights and privileges simply because they are adopted, such criticism cannot be made of the French-American of Lowell whose interest in the welfare and progress of his country and city is a shining example to the other national-

the national joy smoke

For an honest-to-goodness smoke—any kind of weather, any time, anywhere—you get a jimmy pipe and some Prince Albert and make fire with a match!

No matter what gait you're traveling or what's on your mind, for the long pull and the cool pull and the joy pull, why, you get right down to the original idea—a jimmy pipe—and just jam it full of P. A. and there you are, all right side up with the world! Do that!

Prince Albert's got tobacco substance and gives tobacco satisfaction. It isn't a lot of chaff! On the train, in your auto, anywhere, it's your pipe smoke, because it's fresh, and sweet, and delicious, and can't burn your tongue or parch your throat! Bite's taken out by the famous patented process that has made pipe smokers and men who couldn't smoke a pipe before sit up and make some mental notes!

Anchor alongside this: When it comes to a cigarette smoke, P. A. is king of 'em all. You get wise to a package of P. A. and makin' papers and go to it while the going's good. It's a sure-thing bet you'll get the spirit of P. A.'s freshness, fragrance and sweetness.

Take it straight, P. A. is a revelation. Give it a crack—you'll forget that broiled tongue and the fire-brands and the dust-brands.

ities that make up our cosmopolitan community.

Speaking of shining examples Mr. Delisle may take encouragement from the success of his immediate predecessor, our genial postmaster and it is my sincere wish that his success may be no less than that of the former secretary of the retiring congressman.

Mr. Louis P. Turcotte, who was to respond to the toast, "The French Americans," was unable to be present on account of a sudden illness.

Rev. J. B. A. Barrette, O. M. L., of Notre Dame de Lourdes parish was introduced as the next speaker. He spoke on "Our Societies" and advocated a federation of all the French Catholic societies as recommended by Cardinal O'Connor, and spoke at length on the duties of fraternal orders and clubs.

The presiding officer was next introduced and in a few appropriate remarks, presented Mr. Delisle in behalf of the French-Americans of this city a fine solid gold watch.

Mr. Delisle thanked his friends and promised to do all in his power to help them in any way, shape or manner, and promised to fulfill his duties of secretary in a faithful manner. He spoke of his working the political campaign and thanked his many friends and the French people in general for the loyal support they gave the congressman-elect on election day. He expressed his thanks to the members of the various clubs who made the affair possible and concluded by extending to all a happy New Year.

The evening closed with the playing of the "Marseillaise" by the orchestra.

The organization committee in charge of the banquet, which was composed of members of the different French social clubs of the city, was composed of the following individuals: The C. M. A. C., Joseph Payette, Ernest J. Dupont, Edmond Bergeron, Armand Lavoie and Henri Achin, Jr.; Clotys-American club, Omer J. Smith, George Caron, Ferdinand Rousseau and Maxime Lepine; Pawtucketville Social club, Edmond Lavoie, Joseph Harvey, Arsene Trudel, Adolphe Bouchard and Severin Hebert. The officers of the committee were as follows: President, Henri Achin, Jr.; Maxime Lepine, secretary, and Adolphe Bouchard, treasurer.

Among those present at the gathering were the following:

length on the duties of a young man and his ambitions for betterment. He said the downfall of a large number of young people was due to the fact that they are sent to work in the mill at the age of fifteen. He said it is customary in many families to set the children to work as soon as they have attained the age required by law, and in the course of his remarks showed where this action is always detrimental to the young. He concluded by extending his best wishes to the new secretary and by wishing all those present a bright and happy New Year.

Smart Steamer Togs for the Bermuda Trip -- Embroideries Used in Novel Ways Make Lingerie Frocks Interesting -- Gorgeous Evening Gowns

THE call of the South makes itself felt in fashionable circles, the moment Christmas week festivities are over. Society may remain a week or two in town for the early January weddings and may even linger on until the end of the month if the Northern season is particularly gay—and the opera particularly interesting; but preparations for the fitting are being made nevertheless, and sooner or later the social devotees are whisked Southward on a train de luxe, or carried there more slowly by steamer.

Palm Beach is of course the Riviera of America and thither the fashionables repair after the nerve-exhausting winter season and there, again, the round of social gaieties is taken up with new zest because of the change of background and the exhilaration of the strong sea breezes.

Embroidery a Feature of Lingerie Frocks

Lace must take second place as a trimming for summer frocks this year, for embroideries have come into their own and are lavishly used as trimmings for exclusive costumes. The new embroideries are patterned after bold, open-patterned laces of the Italian variety, the Colbert and Littlelle designs having all the sumptuous quality of rich Venice. These new embroideries are used in novel and original ways by the couturiers and the frocks trimmed with them do not at all suggest the juvenile flit costume called to mind by the idea of ordinary embroidery flounces and bandings. Four embroidery trimmed dresses have been sent over from Paris for a young matron who has an important place in the smart set. Two of these pretty dresses are from Lanvin who excels in lingerie models; one is from Jeanne Halle and the fourth from Talbot. The Lanvin models are quite dissimilar, one being pure white and the other having color in its make-up. The white frock has a tunic of all-over eyelid embroidery dropped over a petticoat of shadow lace. The tunic slants, not from front to back, but from the right hip to the left knee. The bodice is a surprise drape of the all-over embroidery over elbow sleeves of shadow lace. A crushed giraffe of champagne blue and green taffeta divides the tunic.

The second Lanvin frock is of sheer white cotton voile flouncing with an embroidered border pattern done in color—a new note in machine embroidery—and a very beautiful one, too. The Lanvin frock shows embroideries in heliotrope and pale blue on the sheer voile ground and there is a dash of heliotrope and rose taffeta with a flat bow across the back and two rather short ends falling, one over the other. This frock has two flatly applied flounces and a draped surplice bodice opening at front and back over V shaped vests of flat lace.

The costume from Halle is intended for dinner wear—rather an innovation it seems to begin an evening gown with machine embroidery, but the new embroidery patterns will change all former sartorial traditions because of their beauty and distinction. This Halle gown has a draped tunic of flowered net over a clinging skirt of white satin, the crossed-over front of the tunic being bordered obliquely from waistline to end of train with a broad band of Colbert embroidery. The bodice is made of this embroidery mounted on white tulle and blouses slightly at the waistline over a tash of crushed white tulle with long tulle ends at the back, weighted with crystal fringe.

The Talbot frock has also a wide edged with embroidery banding or double-edged galloon; nichilum lace being applied flatly under the edge of the galloon at both sides. This tunic, of white net, bordered with galloon, opens widely in front over a skirt of accordion pleated net. The bodice is of the net and bands of the galloon are carried over the shoulders, continuing the line of the tunic. The long sleeves of shirred net have closely set crystal buttons from shoulder to wrist and another line of the buttons extends down the front of the dress from throat to foot. The sash is of rose colored satin and a hat trimmed with roses accompanies the pretty dress.

White Tailored Wear for the Southland

Every woman who goes to Palm Beach or Aiken for a prolonged stay should have with her a well cut, not too small, not about tallish which will be about the most useful item of her wardrobe. This suit may be made of lightweight serge, of mohair or of the worsted and mohair, which French couturiers make much use of for gowns and coat suits to be worn on the Riviera. White tailored frocks of aerie, shown among wearables of the Southland, are very modern and chic, although extremely simple in design. They have very subtly draped skirts attached to long-sleeved bodices under satin girdles or smart white suede belts. A very open Robespierre collar of white satin finishes the neck and there are flat buttons of white pearl, or ball buttons of the creamy Roman pearl on the bodice front and the sleeves.

A new model which will assuredly be taken up for spring wear, is shown in the pretty afternoon costume from Redfern which has a most coquettish scalloped jacket over a draped skirt of contrasting silk. The jaunty little coat is made of white and violet striped taffeta. This skirt is slightly draped at the back and is edged with a boxpleated ruffle of the violet taffeta piped with the striped material on the bias. Flounces and ruffles are to be much used on next summer's skirts. If the clothes now being made up for the Southland are true prophets. The trimmings of bias pipings are a fetching note of the violet silk jacket and one must not pass by the new box-pleated sleeve effect, nor the graceful fehu drapery of lace. A white straw turban faced with pale violet velvet and trimmed with purple and white wings matches the frock. The parasol is of tuckered white silk with a violet stained handle. The buttoned boots are of dull calf with suede tops in pale gray color.

Pictureque Headgear a Harbinger of Spring

The Southland hats are enchanting. For the most part they have the airy grace and broad lines that have been denied in the chic, but small hats of the winter season. Two typical Palm Beach hat types are pictured; one the big black hat with a pleated frill of black tulle extending beyond the brim, and the other, the charming hat which accompanies the lingerie dress of embroidery and lace. This hat is of pale pink satin straw faced under the brim with palest pastel violet satin. Around the low crown is a wreath of pale pink and violet roses, a bow of black velvet ribbon at the back having ends which are brought under the brim as shown in the picture, the two ends apparently meeting under a pink rose from whence drop long streamers of the black velvet.

Another charming hat is shown with the evening wrap of silk and lace designed for wear at Palm Beach. The wrap is a modestly draped affair of night blue crepe de chine with a flatly applied flounce of black chunilly sewn with steel bands. The drape of black lace at sleeve edge and shoulder, falls over a drapery of narrow white lace. The wrap is unlined and is very soft and clinging in effect, the satin band at the foot giving it sufficient weight. With this admirable summer-weight wrap goes a picture hat of blue satin straw trimmed with blue velvet ribbon and small, old-pink roses. The crown is of heavy marine lace, laid over old-pink satin. The blue of the hat harmonizes with the rich, night-blue shade of the

Gorgeous Evening Gowns for the Ponce de Leon Ball Room

A new note in evening gown is the use of accordion pleating. Many gowns just completed for Palm Beach wear show draped tunics of gold lace or bead-embroidered net, over narrow skirts of accordion pleated chiffon, satin or crepe. Much gold lace is used, and yards of crystal and rhinestone trimming make the gowns of simplest cut distinguished and brilliant. The evening costume pictured has a tunic of gold lace over peach pink charmeuse. The lace drapery is drawn over a bolero of mauve satin on the bodice and tiny pink satin roses decorate bodice and sleeve. The Oriental cap of jeweled, latticed bands is particularly modish, for these glittering caps are the rage, and are fashioned of jeweled net, bead-embroidered net and lace, and pearl-sewn silver and gold net. The cap pictured has an upstanding ornament of the shape of a pink ostrich plume.

Opals are so soft that when they are first taken from the mine they can be picked to pieces with the finger nails.

Little Things Noted On Fifth Avenue

THE woman who goes about her wardrobe provision systematically, makes sure, first, that the staples thereof are correctly in keeping with current modes; that her tailored suit, for instance, is correctly cut; that her hats have the right lines even though made of inexpensive materials; that her wardrobe is suitably planned for the requirements of her social needs. Then she takes care to have exactly the proper sort of accessories to give the mainstays of her costume the final touch of modishness with small belongings up-to-the-moment in character.

The New York woman who dresses well studies first the new fashions as displayed in the shops or consults her dressmaker and tailor if she is so situated that they may be given carte blanche in the matter of materials. But for her accessories—the little things that count so enormously in the sum total of smartness, she relies usually on style inspirations caught in the fashionable restaurants and on Fifth Avenue, the promenade of the elect, where any fine afternoon may be observed scores of well dressed women whose costumes cover the gamut of coquetry, from well appointed shopping raiment to the most elaborate carriage toilettes. The out-of-town woman, living near New York also comes into town to study the authoritative modes of Fifth Avenue. Her morning is spent in the shops. She lurches at a smart restaurant. Afterward perhaps comes a luncheon, and later, tea at one of the luxurious tea places where fashion congregates; and after that a stroll up or down the Avenue with the throng of other folk who promenade at this hour.

At the present moment, the silhouette of every fashionably gown woman is much the same. A skirt and coat costume will be the general type of garb, for wraps and utility coats are not worn in the afternoon hour on Fifth Avenue unless one is in a limousine or motor car. Those who stroll on the pavement wear coat suits of velvet, of wool-backed satin, of corduroy or of some very silky-surfaced worsted fabric. The skirt will undoubtedly be draped—and will have a clinging effect around the feet, the boots showing beneath being dainty in line and having buttoned tops of dull kid, twilled cloth or light colored suede. The coat will be in the cutaway or "Bicycle Bird" style, or may have a fanciful cut—the belted Russian blouse coat is being affected by young girls and slender women at the moment. Handsome furs of pointed fox, skunk, red fox, chinchilla, squirrel, minkskin, or opussum may be worn with the graceful suit, or there may be simply a little turned down collar of fur with a big, soft muff to match. It will be the exceptional woman who does not carry a muff. Very few mannish gloves of kid in the reddish brown shades will be observed, though one may see white gloves, kid, buff kid, gray mocha, washable white doekskin and black glove gloves stitched with tiny lines of white.

The hat will undoubtedly be small; for though large hats are worn this winter, they are not worn with the promenade costume as a rule, the small, even very small, type of hat being considered much more chic; and an ostrich plume, or perhaps two, will curl over almost every hat-brim, at one side. Over the small, chic hat will be draped a face veil of the fashionable shadow or shelland mesh preferably taupe in color, though some very smart looking women who go in for black and white a good deal are wearing small black velvet hats and white shelland veils, the touch of white being repeated in a white flower pinned against the small fur collar or large fur neckpiece.

This brings one to the fad for boutonnières. Every smartly dressed woman now wears a boutonniere of one sort or another and the finer the cluster of posies, and the brighter the color, the more fashionable the effect. Flame red geraniums are excessively fashionable and are having a tremendous vogue as fur boutonnières—that is, tiny nosegays pinned against the fur of collar, neckpiece or muff; but those who dislike so brilliant a color, wear nosegays of small yellow flowers, of pink English marguerites, of mimosa or of old fashioned heliotrope. Violets are seen in the real blossoms, for these flowers are universally adored by women, but for some reason or other imitation violets are under the ban and are not considered good taste.

The white silk shelland veil pictured is of a type liked for cold, blustery days, for these veils as well as being fascinatingly becoming, are very warm. The veil in question has a "beauty spot" of black velvet which comes at one corner of the mouth and gives a very pleasant expression to the face. This veil is smartly adjusted over the small toque of gold lace, the paradise aigret at the side sweeping downward at a particularly smart angle and not being confined under the closely drawn veil.

Handbags are smaller and daintier than of yore and the leather bag handsomely mounted is now smarter than the reticule of fanciful material slung from cords—for afternoon use at least. Illustrated, is a new bag of red saffian leather with a handle which is strapped to the wrist—an admirable arrangement these days of hold-ups and handbag-snatching on dark street corners.

The small, closely fitting collarette of fur or ostrich is very chic just now and gives the final touch of correctness to an afternoon costume. With such a collarette, the tailored coat fastens closely up at the throat and when the coat is removed in the later or restaurant the collarette is often retained for the sake of its smartness.

REVIEW OF YEAR'S POLICE WORK

Not a Homicide Here in 1912—
Important Arrests Show the Ability of Police Officials

The past year has been remarkable from a police standpoint for the absence of crime. It is with a good deal of satisfaction that Lowell did not have a single murder or homicide within its limits during the past year. Very few cities can point to such a record as that for a whole year.

The first incident of any importance was the strike at the South Lowell Rendering works in the early part of February. Soon after its inception, took place. Some apprehension was felt by not a few of our citizens, that perhaps a repetition of what happened in Lawrence might take place, but after a period of four or five weeks, during which time the strike lasted, a mutual settlement was effected between employers and employees that would up with a good natured demonstration on the part of all concerned. A remarkable incident of this strike was the fact that both employers and employees recognized in the strike a fairness to all concerned, that gave vent on both sides to many pleasant compliments to the good sense shown by those to whom was entrusted the enforcement of the law. It gave the citizens at large, really their first opportunity of appreciating the composition of our department and what they are capable of doing under conditions threatening the industrial peace of our city.

A review of the large important arrests and convictions during the year will be printed tomorrow.

WILSON'S LUCKY YEAR

1913 Greeted by the President Elect

PRINCETON, Jan. 1.—Nineteen hundred and thirteen was greeted by President Wilson as his lucky one. He is always delighted at any combination by addition, multiplication or subtraction that will produce his lucky number. "Thirteen has always been running through my life in connection with some good, fortune," he said today. The year of his nomination to the presidency produced 13 by adding the digits 1-2-3-4. Woodrow Wilson contains just 13 letters. He was 13 years a professor at Princeton when he was chosen its president. "Not only will I be taking office in 1913," said the president-elect today, "but the electoral college meets on Jan. 13 this year."

The Wilson family plans to spend the first day of its "lucky" year at home.

Brilliant Affair Held at Highland Club---Members and Friends Celebrated Birth of New Year

VIEW OF THE BALL ROOM AT THE HIGHLAND CLUB HOUSE AS IT LOOKED FROM THE STAGE LAST EVENING

A large number of members of the Highland Club, with their families and friends, attended the "Winter Garden Party," given at the club last night. It was announced that the affair was to be a very elaborate one but few people had any idea that the decorations would be on such a large scale. All the rooms of the club house were devoted to the use of the guests, and they were elaborately decorated, but the club hall was the main attraction, Christmas trees, evergreen, imitation of icicles and snow and many colored lights were scattered in beautiful array. The scene presented a very festive aspect, not at all in harmony with the weather without. Over 10,000 "snowflakes" were suspended from the ceiling. A large red ball was hung directly from the center of the hall and from this, a center, about 200 yards of green streamers were hung. About 200 yards of Christmas tree boughs were placed in appropriate sections of the hall. All the window arches and balcony rails were covered with greenery. Rows of Christmas trees were placed on the stage and behind these Poole's orchestra of Boston discoursed sweet music. Another feature of the evening was the colored electrical effects in which red, white and green were harmoniously blended. The guests of the evening began to arrive at the club house at eight o'clock and between the hours of eight and nine a very delightful concert was given by Poole's orchestra of Boston. Promptly at nine o'clock the dancing

MADE NEW YEAR'S GIFT WOMEN ON POLICE FORCE

Judge Enright Lenient
With Prisoners

WHO APPEARED BEFORE HIM IN POLICE COURT

Many Offenders Promised to Start the New Year by Refraining from Use of Intoxicating Liquors

It was fortunate indeed for the prisoners who appeared before Judge Enright in police court this morning that it was the first day of the new year, for the majority of the offenders were old timers and would in all probability have been sentenced to jail or the state farm, but His Honor was inclined to be lenient and instead of imposing direct sentences handed out New Year gifts in the form of suspended sentences.

There were five offenders before the court, four for drunkenness and one for non-support, and each was given a suspended sentence of four months in jail and placed in the custody of the probation officer for a term of six months.

Louis W. Mulhinch was the first person called. He was charged with drunkenness and the court was informed that it was the man's third offense within a year. Mulhinch asked to be given just one more chance. "You've been on parole and on probation but I am going to give you another chance and I want to see that you will do better in the future," said Judge Enright. The defendant promised to do so and the court gave him a suspended sentence of four months in jail.

Michael Haley was also a third offender and entered a plea of guilty to a complaint charging him with drunkenness. "Do you think you could stop drinking if I gave you a chance to go on probation?" asked the court. The answer was in the affirmative, whereupon the court imposed a suspended sentence and added: "This is New Year's morning and you should make the best effort possible to keep away from drink."

Michael Litchman was given a suspended sentence of four months in jail, and Annie Donohoe was treated in a similar manner.

William Burns was charged with failing to provide proper support for his wife, Mrs. Burns. Burns testified that he has five children and his wife gives her little or no money. He drinks a great deal and sometimes when under the influence of liquor strikes her. The court ordered Burns to pay $7 a week to his wife and then gave him a suspended sentence of four months in jail.

CAUGHT BIG FISH

Hector Lavallee Treated His Friends to a Pickered Dinner at the Cosmopolitan Cafe in Market Street

Hector Lavallee, whose smiling countenance adorns the city treasurer's office at city hall, went fishing through the ice at Nob's pond, Westford, a few days ago and while Hector doesn't claim any relationship with the largest pickered to date, he is the largest pickered to face the open air in Westford in many months.

The pickered measured twenty-four inches and weighed more than four pounds. The poor fellow had frisked about in the waters of the pond and with light and merry heart, had expected to grow to a green old age and see his family of four boys and two girls settled comfortably for life. His beautiful dream of a happy and contented future was wiped out when Hector lured him to the hook and the once happy denizen of the deep spent his New Year's eve in the dining-room of the Cosmopolitan cafe in Market street. Tastefully decorated with greens and other shrubbery, he occupied the place of honor, enthroned on a large silver platter at the New Year's dinner which Hector tendered his friends. Hector's friends constituted a hungry looking bunch, and when they got through there wasn't enough of Mr. Pickered left to hold an inquest on. Only the whiskers, when one by one, the church bells tolled the passing of the year. Hector now regrets that he did not have the pickered stuffed and mounted.

"THROWING OUT ALL LIQUORS"

Liggett, Hall and Lyon Store Announce That Intoxicating Liquors
Can Only Be Procured by Certificate

"Throwing out all liquors!" Perhaps your eyes have already come across this heading of the advertisement of the Liggett, Hall and Lyon Stores, in this paper today. If they haven't just as soon as you finish reading this, turn the paper to the page which contains the advertisement and read it. Beginning today, in all this country and in Canada, the company opens the New Year with a resolution as commendable as any which it is within its power to make and one which will meet with the approbation of all, and that is, that intoxicating liquors on and after this date will be sold only for medicinal purposes and on the presentation of a physician's prescription. In taking this step in the controlling of the sales of intoxicants in its stores, rather than waiting for laws governing the sales of intoxicants to be enacted in the states, the Liggett, Hall and Lyon company is only making another advance in the raising of the plane of the modern drug store, which is advancing and keeping pace with the establishments of other branches of the business world. One month ago on December 1st, the company announced that on and after that date no intoxicating liquors would be sold in its stores in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, except in the compounding of a doctor's prescription. Since that time it has received numerous letters from persons in the two states commending very highly the step it had taken. Today, the new rule forbidding the sales becomes simultaneously effective in the stores of the 22 cities of the United States and throughout the Dominion of Canada. Further comment on the advertisement and its motive would only be ambiguous for it is as thorough and self-explanatory as it is possible to make it.

FOUR BOUTS ON CARD

At Friday Night's Meeting of Local Club

"In great shape," said Jimmy Moriarty, who is to meet Noah Brusson in the main bout at the Lowell Social and Athletic club Friday, when asked as to his condition. He says that he never trained any harder and expects to be in perfect trim when the going sounds for the opening round.

Moriarty is a hard hitter and is strong on the haymaker variety. He anticipates sending over one of these heavy ones that will end the engagement, but Brusson, too, is very confident that he will slide in a "boiler maker" that will drop the former there with the wide swiftness, and are fast on their feet, so the members are sure to see some good work at this week's meeting. The men are scheduled to work for twelve rounds.

Tommy Doyle of Lowell are the performers in the eight round semi-final and both are lively boys. Doyle is putting in a lot of work in preparation for the match and by Friday night expects to be in fine fettle. Carroll is doing his conditioning at the United club in Lawrence, working out in the gymnasium and also indulging in road work. In the first preliminary, Young Halpin, from the Acre will exchange "slams" with Kid Dunn, who falls from over the bridge in Contrivance. Their bout is scheduled for six rounds. The other preliminary will be furnished by Young Brown and Kid Smith, both of the "Blats." These two are great rivals and each is training carefully for the mill. The meeting will be held in Mathew hall and will start at 8:35 o'clock.

Cupid Makes Gains
The number of marriage intentions registered at city hall for the year 1912 exceeded the number registered for 1911 by 75. The number for 1912 was 1119 and for 1911, 1044.

Saturday, January 4th, is "Quarter Day" at The Lowell Five Cent Savings Bank.

EVERYBODY WHO USED GREAT
KIDNEY REMEDY OBTAINED
FINE RESULTS

At the time I commenced using your Swamp-Root I was so bad that I had to give up work. The pains in my back would be like some sharp instrument piercing my kidneys and I could hardly get out of a chair without help. I finally resolved to give your Swamp-Root a trial and the results were so fine that I have recommended it to others and it seems to produce the same beneficial results with everybody who uses it. I am very thankful to you for your great remedy, Swamp-Root, for I know that it will do all you claim for it.

CHAS. J. SHELTON,
McGraw, N. Y.
Personally appeared before me, this 23rd of September, 1909, Chas. J. Shelton, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.
T. C. GLEASON,
Justice of the Peace.
My commission expires May, 1912.

Letter to

ST. PAUL, Jan. 1.—Mayor Keller, late yesterday announced the appointment of two women as regular members of the St. Paul police department. They are Mrs. Margaret Kelley and Mrs. William Moore. The appointments were made in accordance with a recently enacted city ordinance. The two police women assumed their new duties last night by watching the old year out at the dance hall, where the authorities claim young girls are exposed to bad influences. They will report what they saw to the mayor as they have no authority to make arrests.

TRIPLETS WERE BORN

To Mr. and Mrs. George
Husson of Adams St.

The happiest plan in Lowell today is probably Mr. George Husson of 25 Adams street, who as a New Year's gift was presented three fine little girls. The children weigh four pounds each, but unfortunately one passed away. However, the other two are enjoying the best of health and despite the fact that one died the father and mother are happy people and are hopeful of saving the other two.

The triplets were born a few days ago and immediately they were taken to the Lowell General hospital in order that they might be given proper care.

Mr. and Mrs. Husson have now five children to their credit, although they have been married but a few years.

RECEPTION TO YEAR 1913

Many Celebrations Took Place About City

"Bonne et Heureuse Anne," good and happy New Year, such is the greeting of all French speaking people in town today. Everybody's pleasant and all seem happy. A large number of people have laid down their tools for the day, while our representatives are being ushered into their work at the state house in Boston.

The French speaking people of this city in accordance with the old Canadian custom, which is just starting in Boston, have ushered the new year in in great style. The grocers and butchers and even those who run small variety stores have closed their establishments for the day, while the barber shops were closed at noon.

With the Catholics it is a holy day of obligation, and accordingly services were held in all the churches. This measure, although the question was brought before the legislature several times. Last year Representative Henri Achin, Jr. brought a measure before the house, making this special day a legal holiday, but it was defeated. A few days ago he again filed a similar measure. This time, however, the measure is being presented in the referendum form, and the matter will probably be brought to the attention of the voters next November.

The New Year's custom in good old Canadian families is to enjoy dinner at the old homestead, where all the members of the family gather for the noon meal to later meet in the refectory and enjoy themselves. In some families when the children and grandchildren gather the audience is of fairly good size.

The city was rife last night with various forms of celebrating the arrival of the year 1913 and the headquarters of the various organizations of Lowell were the scenes of joyous events. The New Year was indeed accorded a rousing welcome when she made her appearance in the Spindle City as the clocks sounded the 12th stroke of the midnight hour. In the social clubs and society balls the old year was watched out and the new hailed.

In Merrimack Square there was several minutes of uninterrupted din as a great bunch of fireworks were set off at the stroke of 12. In Page's Spa, the second annual New Year's banquet was partaken of by many people.

Prizes Sent By Parcel Post System
SAN JOSE, Cal., Jan. 1.—Residents here are hopeful that for this day at least their city will hold the country's records for the amount of mail sent by parcel post. Among other things two carloads of prizes, donated by the United Fruit company, were sent out on early morning trains to addresses in all parts of the country. Each package contains directions for cooking the delicious fruit.

White and Negro Miners Clash
CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 1.—Labor trouble has broken out anew in the Kanawha coal field, where troops were on duty several months last year. Rioting is reported from Mosby, where four watchmen were driven from the camp after a battle in which many shots were fired. One man is in jail and another in a hospital here as a result of a fight at Wacoma between white and negro miners. Although the soldiers were withdrawn from the disturbed region several weeks ago, the proclamation of Gov. Glasscock declaring martial law has never been revoked.
